

Bundaleer Forest: Visitor access information

Some closures remain in place.

Some areas of the historic Bundaleer Forest remain closed to visitors, following a bushfire event during January 2013.

Unstable pine and native tree species present a potential risk to public safety, leading to closure across some areas of plantation, native forest and parts of the Heysen Trail.

Some sections of forest have been reopened, such as the well known New Campbell Hill lookout which is accessible on foot, via Neindorf Road.

Please refer to the map adjacent and local signage for more information on forest closures still in place.

For their own safety, visitors must not enter affected forest areas, which remain closed until further notice.
