

Mount Crawford Forest open again after fire.

Some visitor access restored.

Parts of the Mount Crawford Forest have reopened to visitors, following the Sampson Flat bushfire in the Adelaide Hills.

The fire began on 2 January 2015, burning an extensive area of ForestrySA plantation and native forest, leaving many trees unstable and presenting a potential risk to public safety.

For safety reasons, visitors should keep clear of all areas while ForestrySA works to ascertain the exact extent of the damage.

All remaining areas will be reopened as soon as safety permits.

Please refer to the map adjacent for more information regarding specific areas affected.
